

COVID-19 Vaccine Additional Primary Dose

FloridaHealthCOVID19.gov

An additional primary dose is administered to improve moderately to severely immunocompromised people's immune response to their initial two-dose series of the Pfizer or Moderna COVID-19 vaccine.

YOU CAN GET AN ADDITIONAL PRIMARY DOSE OF THE PFIZER OR MODERNA COVID-19 VACCINE IF:

You received 2 doses of the Pfizer vaccine over 28 days ago and
You're moderately or severely
immunocompromised*,
And you're age 5 and older.

OR

You received 2 doses of the Moderna vaccine
over 28 days ago and
You're moderately or severely
immunocompromised*,
And you're age 18 and older.

You should use the same COVID-19 vaccine (Pfizer or Moderna) that you received initially for your additional primary dose. Unlike a COVID-19 booster shot, the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines are not interchangeable for an additional primary dose.

People should talk to their health care provider about whether an additional primary dose is appropriate for them.

At this time, an additional primary dose is not recommended for people who received the J&J COVID-19 vaccine.
